

Yes we did quite a lot. In, to Salisbury Plain on exercise, on Exercise Druid's Dance for three weeks doing... There was a different mix sort of things there, we did FIBUA training, building in, fighting in built up areas using our close sort of support engineering tasks, sort of blowing holes in things and getting troops through walls and... So we did that, and then we did bridging, which is more sort of Engineer specific to us, and then, then we went away to a place called Thetford and there's, they've got an Afghan village up there which just like a demonstration. We went down there, practiced doing patrols and that. It was a, they set up scenarios for us so there was actually people in the village, there was enemy for us there as well. There was casualty stands so there was a mock-up of, of lads who had been injured and you had to go in and treat them. There was loads of different sort of range packages there so we, really worthwhile doing.
