

Ronnie SherlawBren Training

The Bren gun, which was always taught by these very repetitive methods of the senior NCOs who always knew the Bren gun backwards, but they did it exactly the same way every time. You would learn the various parts. You would learn how to put them together. You would learn everything by numbers as it were. I think it was successful insofar as if you did things repetitively you eventually did them without thinking about them.